Video game scams to look out for when you or your kids play online

Online gaming is an activity both you and your kids can enjoy. While many online gaming platforms are relatively safe, letting your guard down when it comes to online video game scams can be as damaging as responding to those phishing scams we warn you about. Here are some ways to avoid having your personal information compromised.

Be wary of links

If you receive a message asking you to click on a link or download a file, be wary. They could have malicious malware attached that infects your computer or allows thieves to steal your personal information by logging your keystrokes.

Go with a trusted source

Only download games or purchase online extension packs from trusted websites. Not only could you end up buying an inferior product, but you could have your finances and identity compromised, as well.

Guard your account

It is important to protect all of your online gaming accounts just like you would protect your bank account. Use strong, unique passwords in order to keep fraudsters from breaking into your account. If your game offers two-step verification, use it.

Set boundaries

Online gaming communities can often result in online friendships with other players, but make sure you don't get taken advantage of. Never give personal or financial information about yourself to another player. 💰

QUICK TIP

Did you know you can finance?

Summer may be over, but that doesn't mean the adventure has to end. Set off on the open road with a new camper or RV financed by an RV loan, home equity loan or HELOC. Learn more at TinkerFCU.org. 💰

It's National Life Insurance Month

Life Insurance Awareness Month is an opportunity for you to identify your need for life insurance, review current coverage, verify beneficiaries, and take action by asking yourself the following questions:

- How much coverage do I need to care for my family?

- Have I had a major life event since I last reviewed my life insurance?
- If I lost group insurance through my employer, how would that affect my family?

The team at TFCU Financial Advisors can help:

- Identify insurance needs
- Select a type of life insurance product
- Provide quotes from various insurance companies
