TFCU gives back to another member

William Bowden, pictured with Tori Lane, assistant manager of the Oklahoma City, Northwest branch, received an unexpected surprise recently — a check from TFCU matching his last mortgage payment.

When William received the news, he said he could not believe he was a part of such an amazing program and credit union.

“I never dreamed I would receive something like this for paying my house payment or car loans. I sincerely thank TFCU for this wonderful gift.”

— William Bowden

Improve your financial health: Ways to save money on a tight budget

Saving money can be challenging when you're living paycheck to paycheck, but financial health is imperative to building and maintaining your “rainy day” savings fund.

Here are some ways to improve your financial health while sticking to a tight budget.

Save first

We all have automatic drafts set up for our monthly, recurring bills. With this handy feature, paying bills seems nearly effortless — one less thing you have to remember to pay, and no late fees.

Treat your savings account just like a monthly, recurring bill. Set up an automatic deduction to savings for a specific amount each pay period and watch your account grow.

Downsize

You should only continue to pay for services you are actively using. This includes gym memberships, music and television streaming services, media packages and various monthly subscriptions that are virtually collecting dust or simply not being used.

Monitor your accounts

Be sure to monitor your expenses by double checking your monthly statements. See if you may be paying for goods and services you rarely use. If so, cancel them.

Budget

Create and stick to a budget at all times. Be sure to recognize your needs versus wants and always live within your financial means. 💰
